Many employers see the value in sending their employees to DOCUCON to keep them up to speed on the latest developments in the world of clinical documentation improvement. The education provided at the conference will help you streamline your processes and improve your revenue cycle — which is something the whole company benefits from.

Tips for getting your employer on board:

- 1 Prepare your “why.” Review the conference agenda (coming soon) and make note of sessions that'll strengthen your existing skills or help you develop new ones. Circle it back to how these session topics relate to your employer's needs and your work.
- 2 Highlight the educational opportunities. In just 2 days, you'll gain tons of insight on industry changes, trends, and best practices from leading experts in your field. Plus, you'll get to walk away with 12 CEUs.
- 3 Emphasize your commitment to the team. Remind your employer that your efficiency, accuracy, and confidence in your role directly impacts the team's workflow and the company's revenue cycle.

“Companies that invest in employee training enjoy 218% higher revenue per employee versus companies that don't.”
